For readers of Sapiens, a paradigm-shifting book which brings a crucial Indigenous perspective to history, education, money, power, and sustainability—and offers a new template for living.

“Sand Talk unpacks for us something originally genius about Indigenous thought, which has for too long been dismissed as archaic folk knowledge from old oral cultures of interest only to academics and fetishists. This book shows how vital and alive and essential Indigenous ways of being and thinking are. Yunkaporta is so smart, funny, and accessible.

Summary: The son of a Cree father and a white mother, David A. Robertson grew up with virtually no knowledge or understanding of his family’s Indigenous roots. His father, Dulas-or Don, as he became known-had grown up on the trapline in the bush northeast of Norway House, Manitoba, only to be transplanted permanently to a house on reserve, where in school he couldn’t speak his language, Swampy Cree, unless in secret with his friends. Robertson’s mother, Beverly Evers, grew up in a small Manitoba town with no Indigenous families until Don arrived as the new United Church minister. They married and had three sons, and as Robertson believed, decided together to raise them apart from their Indigenous identity. David grew up without his Summary: Thumps Dreadful Water has finally found some peace and quiet. His past as a California cop now far behind him, he's living out his retirement as a fine-arts photographer in the small town of Chinook. His health isn't great, and he could use a new stove, but as long as he's got his cat and a halfway decent plate of eggs, life is good.

All that changes when a body turns up on the eve of a major water conference and the understaffed sheriff's department turns to Thumps for help. Thumps wants none of it, but even he is intrigued when he learns the deceased was developing a new technology that could revolutionize water and oil drilling . . . and that could also lose some very powerful

Summary: Bernice Meetoos will not be broken.

A big, beautiful Cree woman with a dark secret in her past, Bernice ("Birdie") has left her home in northern Alberta to travel to Gibsons, B.C. She is on something of a vision quest, looking for family, for home, for understanding. She is also driven by the leftover teenaged desire to meet Pat Johns--Jesse from The Beachcombers--because he is, as she says, a working, healthy Indian man. Birdie heads for Molly's Reach to find answers, but they are not the ones she expected.

Summary: In 2014, the nation was rocked by the brutal violence against young Aboriginal women Loretta Saunders, Tina Fontaine and Rinelle Harper. But tragically, they were not the only Aboriginal women to suffer that year. In fact, an official report revealed that since 1980, 1,200 Canadian Aboriginal women have been murdered or have gone missing. This alarming official figure reveals a national tragedy and the systemic failure of law enforcement and of all levels of government to address the issue.

Journalist Emmanuelle Walter spent two years investigating this crisis and has crafted a moving representative account of the disappearance of two young women, Maisy Odjick and

Jean Craighead George’s Newbery Medal–winning classic follows an Eskimo girl lost on the Alaskan tundra, with extensive backmatter and a refreshed package in time for the anniversary of Jean’s 100th birthday.

Summary: To her small Eskimo village, she is known as Miyax; to her friend in San Francisco, she is Julie. When the village becomes unsafe, Miyax runs away . . . only to find herself lost in the Alaskan wilderness, without food, without even a compass to guide her. Survival is a daily struggle, until a pack of Arctic wolves accepts her as one of their own.

Ten powerful contemporary stories by American Indian writers

Summary: The ten stories that make up this collection are raw, original, and fresh. While they have in common the American Indian experience as seen through young adult eyes, they are as different from one another as they are from anything you've read before. Ten authors--including Sherman Alexie, Joseph Bruchac, Louise Erdrich, and Joy Harjo--set their stories against varied backgrounds: a supermarket checkout line, a rowboat on a freezing lake at dawn, a drunken dance in the gym. Their work captures contemporary Native America in all its diversity. The Summary: "Billie Wind lives with her Seminole tribe. She follows their customs, but the dangers of pollution and nuclear war she's learned about in school seem much more real to her. How can she believe the Seminole legends about talking animals and earth spirits? She wants answers, not legends.

"You are a doubter," say the men of the Seminole Council and so Billie goes out into the Everglades alone, to stay until she can believe. In the wilderness, she discovers that she must listen to the land and animals in order to survive. With an otter, a panther cub, and a turtle as companions and guides, she begins to understand that the world of her people can
